How to find my iphone using android. How can i use find my iphone on android.

Life is unpredictable, and no matter how careful you are, losing track of your Android device is a fair possibility. Thanks to many-many advancements, you can track your device and remotely lock or erase it for safekeeping. While you can track an iPhone using Find My, can we locate lost Android devices from iPhone? Well!!! Of course, you can. The App Store is brimming with tracking apps, including some great parental control apps for iPhone that can track connected Android phones. However, almost all come with a massive restriction, that the app should be pre-installed in that device and have location access. Though how many of us have a pre-installed tracking app? So how can we track Android phones in this scenario? Well, Google has straightforward solutions! Read on. How to track and locate lost Android phones from iPhone Like iPhone's Find My app, Google has a Find My Device app for Android devices. Unlike other apps, this one does not necessitate having the app on the lost (to be tracked) device. The service uses the Google ID registered with the Android phone and tracks its whereabouts accordingly. Apart from tracking and locating the phone, Find My Device carries several essential features. First and foremost, it gives information such as the device name, battery, and network name (cellular or Wi-Fi). Additionally, the device's IMEI number, last active status, and other such information are also available. As part of security features, you can send a ring on the device, remotely lock the phone and erase all the data. To enable these features, an Android device must have an active Google account and Find My Device enabled. The feature is auto-enabled in most Android devices. To check the status, go to Settings -> Security -> Find My Device. Track Android Phone from iPhone 1. Using Find My Device Find My Device is an Android app, and thus, you cannot install it on your iOS devices. However, you can operate the service via its website, quite similar to when you are tracking your iPhone from an Android phone; here's how - Open Safari or any other browser on your iPhone. In the address bar enter google.com/android/find. Enter the Google ID active on your device and tap Next. Now, enter your Password and tap Next again. You will see the main device page that has a map, device information, and other options. Tap the Location tag on Map. In a new window or Maps app will be open up, with the coordinate information of the Android device. Tap Directions, if you want the route to the device location. While tracking a stolen device, it is advisable to involve local authorities before you venture out to catch the thief. After all, you did your part in monitoring the phone. Let them do there's by getting it back. Limitation: No GPS: If the GPS of the android device is off, then you won't be able to trace the phone. 2-Step Verification is enabled: when you activate this feature, Google sends a verification code on your registered device, whenever you log-in from a different device. Since the device itself is missing, the user is terribly stuck. However, if the user has Google backup codes or a trusted device, they can surpass the issue and track their device. 2. Using mSpy mSpy is a genius app that lets you track any phone from your iPhone. It's perfect for parents who want to keep an eye on their children's whereabouts. Moreover, it does much more than track location. You will get a complete overview of your children's smartphone activity, from calls and text messages to social media usage and internet searches. This makes it one of the best parental control apps, and it's well worth its affordable price. Moreover, it's compatible with Android 4 and later and iOS 7 and later. Here's how to use mSpy to track an Android phone from your iPhone. Note: You can do this setup from a browser on your computer too. Sign up for an mSpy account. Open a browser like Safari or Google Chrome on your iPhone. Go to mSpy.com and log in to your account. Follow the on-screen instructions to set up the device you want to monitor, as shown in the screenshots below. Note: You will be guided to install mSpy on the Android phone via a special method that involves downloading the app through a browser. It cannot be installed through the Play Store. But don't worry, as the method is secure and works. Once you have followed the steps, you can view the Android device's location info within your mSpy account any time you want. Price: $21.00 per month for a monthly plan or $5.00 per month for an annual plan. Sign up for mSpy. Check IMEI number of Android remotely using iPhone. The International Mobile Equipment Identity (IMEI) encrypts a lot of information about your device, from its warranty to hardware/software specifications. In case of theft, the IMEI could be used to track and block your device by the legal authorities. But what if you don't remember such information about your device? Here's how to retrieve the IMEI number via Find My Device. Once you have logged in to google.com/android/find, tap 'i' button next to your device's name on the primary device page. A popup will show your Android device's - IMEI, First registered, and Last seen. This section also avails information about when was the device last online, allowing you to check the status of your stolen or lost device. Remotely ring Android phone using iPhone. A convenient feature, especially when you are in the habit of forgetting your device anywhere and everywhere. Find My Device enables you to remotely call an android device. Once you have logged in to google.com/android/find, tap Play Sound on the main device page. The screen will slide into calling mode and ring your Android device. Limitations: No Sim: This feature is rendered useless when the sim is taken out, replaced, or has no network connection. So, this is an excellent option if you have lost your phone, but not so much if it's stolen. How to remotely secure Android device from iPhone. This feature allows you to remotely lock the android device so that no one can use it. Once activated, the device will be closed, and the lock screen will show a recovery message (if provided) and a call owner sign. The device remains locked until the call is made, even if it is restarted several times. Tap Secure Device on the main device page. Enter a Recovery message, a Phone number where you can be reached and tap Secure Device. Your android device will be locked, showing the following screen. Additionally, all app notifications are hidden during this time. So, no one can access any message, email, or notification received during this time. Notably, the screen cannot be locked if the device is offline. However, the screen will be locked as soon as the device comes online via cellular or Wi-Fi network. It will be locked until the call is made. How to remotely erase data from Android device using iPhone. While losing a phone is painful and upsetting, the repercussions of a data breach can be quite disastrous. This is why Find My Device has smartly incorporated this feature. This will completely wipe off any trace of your personal data or information and factory reset. Tap Erase Device on the main device page. Confirm the action by clicking on Erase Device and follow the onscreen instructions. Similar to the Secure device, this feature will not work if the device is offline. However, the screen will be locked as soon as the device comes online via cellular or Wi-Fi network. It will be locked until the call is made. That's all for now!!! Undoubtedly, the service has its own set of restrictions, but almost all other apps carry a similar set of limitations. Additionally, who would want a random app eating memory in preparation for an unfortunate event. And while it is good to be prepared, these tracking apps have an added risk of privacy and data breach. How well can you trust a third-party app that remains dormant on your device always? This is why I advise Find My Device to keep your phone and data safe! Have you tried any of these device tracking tools yet? Share your experience in the comments below. Read next: Easiest: In a web browser, go to iCloud.com, select Find iPhone, select your device, and select an option to locate or control the missing iPhone. Next easiest: With Google Maps enabled on the iPhone, access Google Maps on an Android device and go to your Timeline. This article explains four ways to track all currently supported iPhones on any Android device capable of running the apps mentioned below. Find My iPhone is a great tool for locating a missing iOS device. It helps to have another Apple device, but if you don't have an iOS or Mac computer, use an Android device. Before you can find an iPhone on an Android, you must enable the proper settings ahead of time. Follow these instructions to locate a missing iPhone with any Android browser app. When setting up Find My iPhone, enable the Send Last Location option. This ensures a location can be determined if the battery dies. If your iPhone is running iOS 15 or later, however, you can still find its location even if the device is powered off. On an Android device that isn't yours, run the browser in incognito mode in Chrome, in Private browsing in Edge, or the private browser setting for whatever browser you're using. This way, none of your personal information is stored. Log in to iCloud.com with your Apple ID. From the menu, select Find iPhone. Choose the device you want to find. Select one of three options to locate or control the missing device: Play Sound to find the device by an audible signal. Enable Lost Mode to prevent intruders from hacking the device. Erase iPhone/iPad to erase the device's data remotely. If the browser is in incognito mode, log out of all accounts and close the incognito browser when you finish. It's possible to track your iPhone with Google Maps, but success is not guaranteed. A specific setting must be enabled on the iPhone before it goes missing. For this method to work, Google Maps must be installed on the iPhone and location access enabled. From the Google Maps app, select your profile image at the top and then choose Settings. Select Personal content and then check that your location tracking is enabled in both the Location Services and Location History settings screens. With Google Maps location access enabled on the missing device, open a web browser on the Android device and log into your Google Maps Timeline. Select the date your phone went missing and review your travel routes and visited locations. If you took photos on that date, the images appear in the timeline and indicate where you were the last time you used the device. Using one of the best phone tracker apps with GPS is also a good tool for locating a lost or stolen iPhone. However, the app must be installed before the phone goes missing. To be safe, use a GPS tracking app compatible with both iOS and Android, such as Life 360. Have a friend with an Android device install the same app and use the app on your phone to locate your phone if it's lost. Alternatively, log into your Life360 account from an incognito browser on an Android device to track your phone. Other tracking apps work similarly. FAQ How do I add AirPods to Find My iPhone?
